PSALM CVI.

42 That they his holy statutes might observe for evermore,
And faithfully obey his laws.

PRAISE ye the Lord, for he is good,
Who can express his noble acts,
With favour of thy people, Lord,
That I the great felicity
And with thy people's joy I may
And may with thine inheritance.

Both we and our forefathers we
Have committed wickedness,
The wonders great which thou, O Lord, hast done in Egypt land,
Our fathers though they saw them all,
Yet did not understand:

Nor yet thy mercies manifold.
But at the sea, yea, the Red-sea,
Nevertheless, he saved them.
That he might make his power known,
And with it forth it was dry'd;
And the deep he did guide.

He f'd them from the cruel hand
And from their enemies he did.

The Second Part.

The waters did them overthrew,
Then they believed his word, and praise him in song: they did give him
His works they quite forgot,
They did neglect to wait:
With food and greedy lust,
Their only stay and trust:

But sinned in the wildernefs
And in the desert tempted God,
Who all their wanton minds desire.
But waiting harmless therewithal.

Then when they lodged in their tents,
Aaron the holy of the Lord.
Therefore the earth did open wide.
And all Abram's company.

In their assembly kindled was
And waiting flame did then burn up.
Upon the hill of Horeb they
And there the molten image they.

Thus to the likenesses of a calf,
They turned all their glory, and
And God their only Saviour they.
Who many great and mighty things.

The Third Part.

And in the land of Ham for them
And by the Red-sea dreadful things
Therefore because they sware and themselves
To bring destruction on them all.
Had not his chosen Moses stood
To turn away his wrath, left he.
They did despise the pleasant land
Yea, and the words that he had spoke.

But in their tents with grudging heart
Nor to the voice of God the Lord.
Therefore against them lifted he
Them to destroy in wildernefs,
And to destroy their feed among
And through the kingdoms of the world all.

To Baal-peor did they join
The sacrifices of the dead.

29 Thus

PSALM CVII.

29 Thus they with their inventions did
And in his fore enkindled wrath
But Phineas stood up with zeal
And judgement he did execute.

The Fourth Part.

It was imputed unto him
And from thenceforth so counted is
At waters called Meribah
Yea, to far forth that Moses then
Because they vex'd his spirit so,
His lips spake unadvisedly,
Nor as the Lord commanded them,
But were among the heathen mix'd,
They did their idols serve, which was
To devils sons and daughters did
Yea, with unkind and murthering knife, the guiltless blood they spilt,
Ev'n their own onsand daughters blood without all cause of guilt:

Whom they to Canaan's idols then
And so with blood of innocents.
Thus they were fain the works of
And with their own inventions did.

Therefore against his people was
And ev'n his own inheritance
And made the hands of heathen men
Into the bands of heathen men.

The Fifth Part.

Yea, and their hateful enemies
And they were humbly made to flock.
But they rebel'd against him, and
Therefore they by their wickedness:
Yet when he faw them in distress
He call'd to mind his covenant,
And by his mercies multitude.

And favour he them made to find
That led them captive from their land.
Save us, O Lord, thou art our God,
And from among the heathen folk.
That we may triumph and rejoice
That we may glory in thy praise.

The Lord the God of Israel
Let all the people say, Amen.

PSALM 107.

GIVE thanks unto the Lord our God,
And that his mercy hath no end.
And such as the Lord redeemed hath
And shew how they were freed.

He gather'd them forth of the lands
Finding no city where to dwell.
Whole thirst and hunger was so great
That faintness them assaulted.
They did they cry in their distress
Who did remove their troublous state,
And by the way which was most right
That they might to their city go.
Let men therefore before the Lord.
And shew the wonders that he doth.

For his empty souls sustai'n'd,
Their hungry souls with goodnews fed,
